Fourth Grade's Fabulous Field Trip

Imagine you're in fourth grade again. Would you like to know how it's changed? On February 27th, the fourth graders at GMG built rockets, watched ice burn, and explored volcanoes. These are just a few of the exciting activities we experienced. Everyone agreed it was tons of fun. Let's explore together all the activities enjoyed at the Science Center of Des Moines.

Upon arriving at the Science Center, we were divided into groups and had the opportunity to explore the building. There were so many activities to choose from, it was hard to determine what to do first. Several groups went to the space center. It was so fun. Here, students made rockets and pushed air into it to see how far we could get the rockets to travel. Some went as far as 40 feet! Another favorite was the egg dropper. The egg dropper is where you take some wrapping cloth and wrap it around an egg. Then you send it up and "boom," it will fall. The goal of this activity was to wrap the egg correctly so it would not break.

Another favorite was the "Fire and Ice" show. Here, we had a blast experimenting with cold chemistry and fiery explosions. After a well-deserved lunch break, all the groups went to a volcano program. Everyone got to pick a rock and explain it to their partner who had their eyes closed. If you got it right you would have many cool sculptures. For example Derek Edwards made a big sculpture that had cool details on it.

When we got back to GMG, Mrs. Eckerman gave us cookies. Then we had some time left over and we went outside. We came inside, then we got ready to go home. As we look back, that field trip was one of the most informational field trips ever!

4th Grade

4T Marker Project

Students in Mrs. Tonner's 4th grade have been working hard this year recycling magic markers. Crayola and GMG, along with other schools, are working together to help kids learn about their role in protecting the environment. Through a program called Crayola ColorCycle, students collect used up markers from classrooms and ship them to Crayola Company to repurpose the markers. Last fall we put information regarding the marker project in the morning announcements, and we got our jobs to do the marker project. The jobs included marker pick-ups, journal writers, poster makers, and box decorators. Last week, we had filled our container with used up markers, and decided it was time to ship them off. First, we counted the markers in groups of ten. We discovered that we had collected 1202 markers! We were so excited. The box weighed approximately 24 pounds! We worked so hard, but the hard work paid off. Our class believes it is important to save the world. Would you like to be part of our mission? If so, simply send in used markers to the school. We'll take care of the rest!! We will be collecting markers now until the end of the school year.
